FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

SIMRYN GILL:
INTERIORS
27 March - 2 May 2009

Mine, 2007-2008

We are pleased to announce our second solo show by Simryn Gill, “Interiors”. Our exhibition directly follows the first leg of her survey show “Simryn Gill: Gathering” at the Museum of Contemporary Art, Sydney which will continue traveling throughout 2009 in Australia and South East Asia. Curated by Russell Storer, this insightful show is accompanied by a book including texts by Storer, Jessica Morgan and Michael Taussig published by Walther Koenig Books.

“Interiors” is comprised of three recent works which variously record materials and forms. Mine, 2007-2008 is a collection of small spheres made from elements found around the artist’s studios in Sydney and Port Dickson, Malaysia, such as paper bark; discarded bits of electrical wire, hair bands and shoelaces; termite mounds; tropical vines; and found forms like a sea-washed brick and a pomegranate bought at a local market. These materials, with their own dense and particular histories, have been rolled, stroked, woven, wound, caressed into silent, mute balls.

Untitled (Interiors), 2009 are bronze sculptures made from casts taken of empty spaces formed by cracks in dry, parched ground in western New South Wales, Australia. To make these objects, Gill worked with Apisit Nongbua, a bronze artist based in Bangkok, Thailand who comes from a family of traditional bronze casters.

The third work in the show are silverprints entitled My Own Private Angkor which record the interiors in an abandoned housing estate in Port Dickson, Malaysia, where thieves had removed aluminum frames from windows and left glass panes poised against the stark walls.

Please join us in the presence of the artist for the opening reception on Friday the 27th of March from 6 to 8:00 p.m.
