GOINGS ON ABOUT TOWN: ART

Morgane Tschiember at Williams

This young French sculptor offers a master class in poise in her New York debut. Blobs of milky blown glass are placed on a freestanding iron framework that resembles a jungle gym, or balanced on wall supports. A much larger iron armature, standing against a drippy wall drawing, supports fractured ceramics suspended by elaborately knotted ropes. At once flawed and dignified, Tschiember's sculptures play the rectilinear against the biomorphic, and remain winningly modest even at architectural scale.

Through Nov. 1.
